H1 update supports full year expectations

Solid State has announced an encouraging first half assisted by its exposure to defence, while also benefiting from delayed sales from the previous financial year. With expected first half profit equivalent to 66% of full year consensus, along with recent contract awards announced, the group is well positioned to deliver on FY26 market expectations and further growth to meet management's longer-term targets.

Positive H1 performance

Management expects to announce H126 revenues of £85.0m (H125: £61.8m) and PBT of £4.75m (H125: £2.5m). Underlying revenues saw a mid-single digit increase (5–7%) after taking into account US dollar headwinds (c 5%) and £23.3m of revenue that had been delayed from delivery in the prior year. Adjusted operating margins are expected to be c 7.0% (H125: 5.1%), progressing towards the medium-term target of 10%. Overall, the group benefited from its diverse exposure, with a strong performance in defence and security more than offsetting a weaker performance from the industrial sector and disruption caused by tariff uncertainty in the US.

Divisional review

From a divisional perspective, Components has seen further normalisation of the global electronics market with continued unwinding of overstocking and associated adjustment to shorter lead times. The Systems division's new integrated systems facility became fully operational in the period, providing greater technical capabilities and enabling the delivery of more complex integrated products. The benefits were highlighted by two significant contract announcements. The Power division is benefiting from a strategic shift towards higher-value activities and a systems approach with orders for battery systems from key Tier 1 customers in the robotics, drone and naval sonar buoy sectors.

H1 performance and order book support full year

The group has started H2 with a solid opening order book of £87.3m, with more than 60% expected to be delivered in H2, which supports market expectations for H2 revenue of c £60m. The opening order book was down from £108.5m at the start of H1, albeit this included the delayed business delivered in H1. However, with recent wins such as the $10.8m Project CAIN defence order, the order book at 31 October stood at £96.6m. While there are clear uncertainties, such as tariffs, the order book provides management with confidence in meeting expectations for the full year.

Half year results will be published on 1 December with management presenting on 2 December at 2pm on the Investor Meet Company platform.
